Sgt. Douglass, Traffic Chief, Asks Transfer

Blocking of Improvements Reported Cause of Request

In a move anticipated in some quarters for months, Sgt. Brooke Douglass, head of Victoria's traffic department, has asked to be relieved of his duties.

It was learned unofficially yesterday.

Sgt. Douglass has asked the police commission to transfer him to the regular patrol branch of the department.

Asked for a statement, Sgt. Douglass refused to comment in any way.

It was reliably learned that the sergeant asked for a transfer because he felt he has been blocked by certain individuals from bringing about improvements in the city's poor traffic conditions. Many of his recommendations have not been implemented.

COMMISSION MEETS

The police commission held a special meeting behind closed doors in the mayor's office yesterday afternoon to discuss the matter. Sgt. Douglass was called in soon after it started. Chief John Blackstock also was present. Other meetings are scheduled, the first at 2 p.m. today.

Fechteler Set For Navy Post

WASHINGTON, Aug. 1 (AP) — Admiral William N. Fechteler was chosen by President Truman today to be the new chief of naval operations.

Truman sent to the senate a nomination of Fechteler to be the successor to the late Admiral Forrest P. Sherman who died suddenly a week ago Sunday in Italy.

Vancouver Contractors Listed Unfair by Council

Two Vancouver construction firms have been placed on the "unfair list" by Victoria and District Trades and Labor Council (A.F.L.-C.I.O.).

The action is against B.C. Contractors Ltd., building the $2,000,000 plywood plant at B.C. Forest Products Ltd., and Stoberg Construction, working in the remanufacturing room of the mill plant.

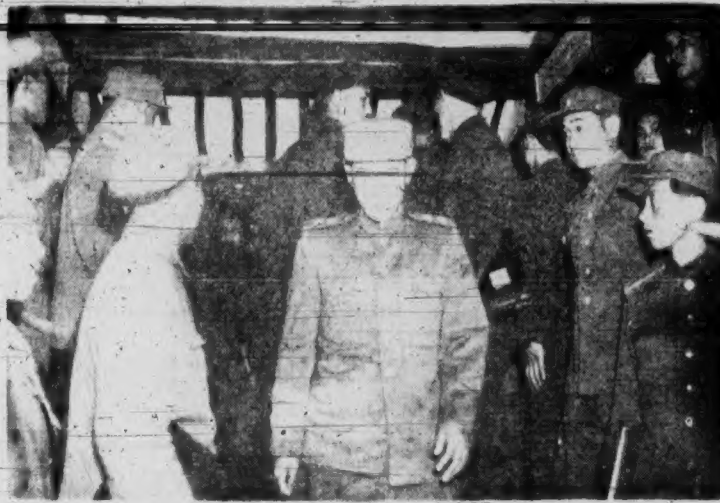

A motion placing the firms on the list was moved by Ernest Oliver, president of local 1509.

U.S. Studies Staging Areas

OTTAWA, Aug. 1 (CP) — The United States air force is studying the problem of building up staging areas for getting warplanes to Europe, Gen. Omar Bradley, chairman of the U.S. joint chiefs of staff, said here today.

He was answering a reporter's question as to whether the U.S. is planning any new military developments in Canada beyond building and manning radar stations.

Jail-Break Suspect Detained in Victoria

Victoria immigration authorities are holding a man from Campbell River who may be a convict who broke jail in Nevada last April.

The man was arrested by R.C.M.P. at Campbell River last Tuesday. He is reported to have been working in the Duncan Bay paper mill now under construction.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation asked the R.C.M.P. to be on the lookout for the fugitive after his escape, as they believed he was headed for a hideout in western Canada.

R.C.M.P. officials last night refused to divulge the name of the man held here until immigration officials have been able to investigate his citizenship status.

BURGLARY TERM
The wanted man, aged 45, was serving a prison term of from one to seven-and-one-half years for attempted burglary. He escaped after serving a small portion of the minimum sentence.

Lawyer W. H. M. Haldane of Victoria is representing the arrested man. He said last night no charge had been laid.

R.C.M.P. officials said identification was from a photograph on a "wanted" circular received by the police shortly after the jail break.

The detained man was traced through his job and picked up at his residence. He is believed to have a wife and children living in Campbell River.

Wilcox said that at the time of Stone's arrest for the Nevada offense, he claimed he was an American citizen, born in Detroit Sept. 22, 1909, Wilcox said the man held in B.C. denies being Stone.

Name of the man as listed here was similar to the F.B.I. records but not the same, The Colonist learned.

Iran Cuts Off Iraq Pipeline

ABADAN, Iran, Aug. 1 (CP) — Iran was reported today to have stopped pipeline delivery of fuel oil from Kermanshah to Iraq in a dispute over payments.

The report came from Alex Mason, acting general manager of the Anglo-Iranian Oil Company refinery here. A.L.O.C. shut down production in Abadan Tuesday to await the outcome of new British-Iranian negotiations in Tehran over Iran's oil nationalization law.

Fuel deliveries from the old A.L.O.C. oil field in Iran to Iraq, where Britain operates, extended have been between 80,000 and 120,000 tons a year.

Healed For Desolation Spur Search for Couple Lost in Fiery Wasteland

YUMA, Ariz., Aug. 1 (AP) — A massive search of the scorching Arizona desert was launched today for a young nurse and pilot of a light plane who apparently set out over the fiery wasteland in search of water and safety after a forced landing more than two weeks ago.

The abandoned plane was found yesterday by an Arizona fish and game commission inspector near an old trail, about 30 miles south of Tule Wells and six miles north of the Mexican border.

The missing pair are June Walker, 26, student nurse at Huntington Memorial Hospital in Pasadena, Calif., whose home is in Malverne, N.Y., and Klaus W. Martens, 28, South Pasadena truck salesman.

Planes carrying paratroopers, helicopters and jeep-borne policemen fanned out from Yuma at dawn today with slight hope of finding either alive.

The couple's undamaged plane was found in a desolate area 50 miles southwest of Yuma. There is no water and no habitation in the area.

The barren, mountainous section is close to historic El Camino Diablo (Devil's Highway), where hundreds died of thirst or the hands of Indians during gold rush days.

Yuma County Sheriff Jim Washburn said temperatures in the desert have exceeded 120 degrees within the last week, and that he felt there was little chance of finding the couple alive.

The sheriff said the plane's engine had been forced down by lack of gasoline. Martens and Miss Walker took off July 13 from East Los Angeles airport on a flight to Blythe, Cal.

Parley Remains Divided

U.N. ADVANCE HEADQUARTERS, Korea, Aug. 2 (Thursday) (AP) — United Nations' communique on today's talks said "fundamental differences remained unresolved."

They will meet again Friday at 11 a.m. (9 p.m. EDT, Thursday). Vice Admiral C. Turner Joy, chief U.N. delegate, twice attempted to draw out Lieut. Gen. Nam Il, chief North Korean delegate, on the basic responsibilities of military commanders during an armistice.

Nam would not respond directly, the U.N. communique said.

Both sides went to the talks at Kaesong today, bolstered by tough stands at home.

Only one correspondent went to Kaesong today with the Allied truce team.

Because a Chinese raft Wednesday smashed a pontoon and knocked out the bridge over the Imjin River, everyone who went to Kaesong today traveled at least part of the way by helicopter.

Lightning Kills Five When Girl Hikers Seek Tree Shelter

Warning Called Too Late; Nine More Suffer Injuries

DRIGGS, Idaho, Aug. 1 (AP) — Five girls were killed by a lightning bolt and nine others injured today at a Mormon girls' camp near Driggs in eastern Idaho.

The dead, all from Idaho Falls, ranged in age from 12 to 19. Four of nine injured girls suffered from severe shock and burns, were moved by plane to Driggs Hospital, 13 miles from the scene of the tragedy.

Strong said one the girls who escaped injury, told him: "The lightning seemed to throw me against a quaking tree. I got up stunned but not injured."

All of the youthful victims, on their annual vacation, were members of Latter Day Saints' girls' wards in Idaho Falls.

The other four did not require hospital treatment.

The tragedy occurred at the rugged Teton mountains near the Idaho-Wyoming border at noon today after 42 girls had just completed exploring eastern Idaho's wind and ice caves, seven miles from their main camp.

When they emerged from the caves for luncheon, a lightning storm broke in full fury.

The girls ran for shelter under a huge pine tree. Miller shouted to them to get out from under the tree, but his warning shout came just as a bolt of lightning struck, enveloping the girls.

When word of the tragedy reached Driggs, 30 horsemen, three ambulances and several trucks in a rescue mission were quickly organized by William A. Strong, president of the Teton National Forest, and Sheriff Dwight W. Looney of Driggs.

BULLETINS

Strike Ends

HULL, Que., Aug. 2 (Thursday) (CP) — A strike of 72 drivers which has paralyzed this city's public bus transportation system for five days, ended early today as the drivers voted to accept the terms of a new offer by the Hull transportation company.

The female cat named Dagwood because her mother was Blondie, has been batting out ping pong games with the Ted Motson family since she was a kitten.

Mr. Motson said: "She's really not so good. I can beat her two games out of three."

YORKTON, Sask., Aug. 1 (CP) — Twenty-month-old Lawrence Baling was accidentally shot to death tonight by his six-year-old brother, Leonard.

U.K. Building A-Bombs; Early Test Unconfirmed

LONDON, Aug. 1 (AP) — Britain now is building atom bombs, a supply ministry spokesman disclosed today.

She thus enters a field heretofore monopolized by the United States and Russia. Britain and Canada helped the United States develop the bomb during the Second World War.

The ministry is in charge of both atomic development and the procurement of military weapons.

Asked whether any bombs have been completed, the spokesman said, "I don't know — and I couldn't tell you if I did know."

The London Daily Telegraph

Australian officials also maintained secrecy about any atomic test explosions. Reports from Sydney quoted Supply Minister Oliver Beale as saying, "I know nothing about it." He is in charge of the Woomera Range.

Labor Struggle Behind Threat

TORONTO, Aug. 1 (CP) — A strike of 3,000 men in Ontario's pulpwood logging industry was threatened today by an official of the new left-wing Canadian Union of Woodworkers.

Behind the threat is a struggle for labor control of the logging camps by two unions, the woodworkers and the Conservative A.F.L. Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners.

Bruce Magnuson, who leads the woodworkers' union, said that if operators bypass his group and attempt to negotiate with the carpenters and joiners' union, 9,000 bush workers employed by the 21 firms would go on strike.

The plan, a modified North Star, will be used to fly the royal couple from central Canada to the west and probably between western provincial capitals, the story says.

The cruiser Ontario, one of Canada's most famous fighting ships, would be used as a floating home on part of the trip in the maritimes. And it might serve as an escort to the Empress of France when the ship brings the royal couple up the St. Lawrence to Quebec City.

For Further Three Years Ottawa to Recommend Foregoing Loan Interest

OTTAWA, Aug. 1 (CP) — The government announced tonight it will recommend to Parliament this fall that Canada forego for another three years the interest on the billion-dollar wartime loan to the United Kingdom.

The balance now is $250,000,000.

This decision, a finance department statement said, resulted from discussions between the governments of Canada and the United Kingdom. Legislation to implement it will be introduced at the fall session of parliament.

The $700,000,000 loan was extended in 1942 as a pledge of advances made to the British government in the period preceding wartime arrangements for mutual aid. The loan was to be interest-free until after the war and in 1946 parliament extended this provision until January 1, 1951.

The government will now ask parliament to extend it for another three years, to January 1, 1954.

It also had been arranged that the principal amount of the loan would be repaid by crediting against the dollars accruing to the United Kingdom from sales or redemptions of Canadian mar-

PORTLAND, Ore., Aug. 1 (INS) — Dagwood, seven-year-old black and tan cat, is ready to take on all comers in ping-pong.

Raise Doubt Paet Talks To Be Held

OTTAWA, Aug. 1 (CP).—Official Ottawa is beginning to doubt that the Atlantic Pact ministerial council will meet here this year at all.

One official said today his personal view is that the odds are about 50-50 and that External Affairs might be able to clear the whole matter up on his return here tomorrow from London.

But it is that opinions among the 12 member nations on the major issues that were to have been discussed at any meeting here in September may not have crystallized to the point where such a meeting would be advisable.

The issues include German re-education, inclusion of Greece and Turkey in the pact, and the economic aspects of closing the gap between what armed strength Western Europe now has and what she needs.

Allied Diplomats Happy About Pravda Article

By J. M. ROBERTS, Jr.
A.P. News Analyst

British and American diplomats are highly pleased over the feat of Foreign Secretary Herbert Morrison in penetrating the iron curtain with a message to the Russian people.

There seems no worry that the British statement, cooked by the trigger by which Pravda could shoot another wad of propaganda and get blanket publication throughout the free world. This very unconcern about publication of Russian propaganda helps make it fall flat in Britain and America. Insofar as people who love neither Britain nor Russia are concerned, the whole incident is probably a draw.

It is natural to assume, that Morrison got a mixed reaction in Moscow. People there who already have perceived for themselves the truth about the Kremlin's protestations regarding liberty and democracy, people who may be nursing small fires of revolutionary intent, would naturally welcome the Morrison message.

But many Russians, even those who criticize their own government or would like to do so if they were not afraid, will resent the same criticism coming from outside.

Morrison's talk about civil liberties probably won't mean much to the Russians. People who have never seen anything but bad government are likely to believe that all governments are bad. Even if they believe their own government is a liar, they will just as quickly believe that the British government is a liar.

The whole thing may signify only a Russian desire to prove that they can act, at times, just as well as anybody.

Publication of the recent letter of President Truman and the U.S. Congress, telling the Russian people that America would like to have peace with them if their government would only act the right, would add importance to the exchanges. Those statements are still in the Russian official lexicon.

British, French Defense Ministers Get Mild Welcome in Washington

WASHINGTON, Aug. 1 (CP).—The defense ministers of Britain and France came to Washington today for a conference with United States and Canadian officials on the standardization of arms. Their arrival was made notable by the absence of top officials of the American defense department to welcome them.

Britain's Emmanuel Shinwell and France's Jules Moch landed at Washington airport, they came to talk over standardizing the calibre of rifles and other small arms used by the major North Atlantic Treaty powers.

Canadian Defense Minister Brooke Claxton was due to leave Canada late tonight.

Two army department officials were at Washington airport to greet the British and French ministers—undersecretary Archibald Alexander and Gen. John E. Hull, vice-chief of staff.

Believes Spain May Be Asset To West Arms

OTTAWA, Aug. 1 (CP).—General Omar Bradley said today Spain could be made an asset to western military strength.

The chairman of the United States joint chiefs of staff, in Canada for four days of talks and fishing, told reporters he wasn't prepared to talk about Spain from the political point of view.

But from a military point of view, a friendly Spain would mean another 300,000 to 400,000 soldiers who are willing to fight Communism.

The lean Missouri soldier reached here by plane from Washington. From his press conference he proceeded to a talk with defense minister Brooke Claxton that was expected to touch on the U.S.-British split over a common rifle.

Tomorrow he meets the chiefs of staff and members of the cabinet. Friday he goes fishing in the Galtoun Hills.

These were other points he made:

He wants to talk over with Canada's chiefs of staff certain military questions affecting the pact organization. The inclusion of Turkey or Greece would be a political matter but their integration in the common structure would be military.

U.S. military production is coming along rapidly.

As for world peace, the U.S. chiefs don't think Russia has changed her "original intention of causing trouble."

Twice, said the chieftain, the flag has been waved in emergency and twice it has saved the MacLeods.

Visit and See Fairies of Skye are Real, Native Tells Reporters

OTTAWA, Aug. 1 (CP).—Skeptical reporters asked today if the chief of the Clan MacLeod really believes in fairies.

They were left in little doubt by the time the chieftain, the visiting Flora MacLeod of Scotland, and her daughter, Mrs. Joan Wedderburn Gordon, were through. It happened in the parliamentary press gallery.

Mrs. Gordon promptly proceeded to give one of the best extemporaneous speeches the parliament buildings have heard in years.

This was the gist:

Fairies are where you find them and you can find them on the misty Isle of Skye, the seat of Dunvegan, the castle in which the MacLeod chieftains reign. On the Isle of Skye, said Mrs. Gordon, the veil between the two worlds, the natural and the supernatural, is so thin that at times they merge, and a belief in fairies becomes quite possible.

Visit Skye some time, she told the reporter, and you will see.

FAIRY FLAG

Another reporter asked about the greatest MacLeod treasure, the Fairy Flag which is supposed to have been given an infant MacLeod chief long ago by a fairy and invested with magic powers to save the clan three times if waved in dire emergency.

Raise Doubt Pact Talks To Be Held

OTTAWA, Aug. 1 (CP)—Official Ottawa is beginning to doubt that the Atlantic Pact ministerial council will meet here this year at all.

One official said today his personal view is that the odds are about 50-50 and that external factors may be able to clear the matter up on his return here to Ottawa tomorrow.

Belief is that opinions among the 12 member nations on the major issues that were to have been discussed at any meeting here in September may not have crystallized to the point where a meeting would be advisable.

The issues include German rearmament, inclusion of Greece and Turkey in the pact and the economic aspects of closing the gap between what armed strength Western Europe now has and what she needs.

STILL WAITING

The day-by-day wait at external affairs headquarters for final word from the council's deputies in London is still going on and word still may come that there will be a meeting here in mid-September word that other departments, notably defense, into a hectic siege of preparation.

But Mr. Pearson raised a possibility today in London which may mean any September meeting is out.

He told reporters it is still under consideration, but there is a possibility it will be merged with a later meeting in Europe.

INTERPRETING THE NEWS

By J. M. ROBERTS, Jr.
A.P. News Analyst

British and American diplomats are highly pleased over the feat of Foreign Secretary Herbert Morrison in penetrating the iron curtain with a message already have perceived for themselves the truth about the Kremlin's protestations regarding liberty and democracy.

People who may be nursing small fires of revolutionary intent, would naturally welcome the Morrison statement.

But many Russians, even those who criticize their own government or would like to do so if they were not afraid, will resent the same criticism coming from outside.

Morrison's talk about civil liberties probably won't mean much to the Russians. People who have never seen anything but bad government are likely to believe that all governments are bad. Even if they believe their own government is a liar, they will just as quickly believe that the British government is a liar.

The whole thing may signify only a Russian desire to prove that they can act at times, just as well as anybody.

Publication of the recent letter of President Truman and the accompanying message from the U.S. Congress, telling the Russian people that America would like to have peace with them if their government would only act on the right, would add importance to those statements. Those statements are still in the Russian official press.

British, French Defense Ministers Get Mild Welcome in Washington

WASHINGTON, Aug. 1 (CP)—The defense ministers of Britain and France came to Washington today for a conference with United States and Canadian officials on the standardization of arms. Their arrival was made notable by the absence of top officials of the American defense department to welcome them.

Britain's Emmanuel Shinwell and France's Jules Moch landed to talk over standardizing the calibre of rifles and other small arms used by the major North Atlantic Treaty powers.

Canadian Defence Minister Brooke Claxton was due to leave Canada late tonight.

The Governor General will become the first white man ever to be admitted to the Crazy Dog Society, an honor previously reserved for Blood braves.

A condition of membership is that the recipient tell his best adventure story.

He will also be inducted into the select Kanai chieftain's association as Chief Pu-O-To-Kon. Translated, his title in the honorary Indian chiefs' association means Chief Eagle Head.

Close to 2,500 Indians will gather near the southwestern Alberta town of Standoff for the official induction ceremonies.

Some 1,500 of the Blood tribe, currently gathering for their annual sun dance rites, will be on hand. In addition close to 1,000 braves and their squaws from the Blackfoot Confederacy are expected.

Believes Spain May Be Asset To West Arms

OTTAWA, Aug. 1 (CP)—General Omar Bradley said today Spain could be made an asset to western military strength.

The chairman of the United States joint chiefs of staff in Canada for four days of talks and fishing, told reporters he wasn't prepared to talk about Spain from the political point of view.

But from a military point of view, a friendly Spain would mean another 200,000 to 400,000 soldiers who are willing to fight Communism.

The lean Missouri soldier reached here by plane from Washington. From his press conference he proceeded to a talk with defense minister Brooke Claxton that was expected to touch on the U.S.-British split over a common rifle.

Tomorrow he meets the chiefs of staff and members of the cabinet. Friday he goes fishing in the Gatineau Hills.

These were other points he made.

He wants to talk over with Canada's chiefs of staff certain military questions affecting the pact organization. The inclusion of Turkey or Greece would be a political matter but their inclusion in the common structure would be military.

U.S. military production is coming along rapidly.

Postal Service Disorganized

POSTMASTER "GENERAL" Rinfret, seconded by his civil service deputy, has been touring the country in the interest of Mr. Rinfret's version of a new and streamlined postal service for Canada. The principal arguments used are that the service has been improved, the revenues increased and this at a saving to the country by economies in personnel and otherwise. To put it quite bluntly, the service instead of being improved appears to have been very nearly disorganized. Increased revenues there undoubtedly are, since the Dominion increased postage rates wholesale on third-class mail matter. The saving in personnel is quite unbelievable, for as fast as Mr. Rinfret says postal workers have been laid off, his deputy adds that they have not been thrown out of employment but re-engaged elsewhere in the civil service.

Speaking of this community, it has been many years since Greater Victoria has had the painful experience it is encountering now with Mr. Rinfret's "reorganized" postal service. Business and residential mails are chronically delayed in delivery; airmail covers do not seem to be able to get out of the sorting room at week-ends; childish mistakes are recurring with properly addressed mail; and the morale of postal workers never has been at such a low ebb. If this is any improvement, other than in the postmaster-general's mind, then the world must have acquired a new meaning.

With more people in Canada than ever before, why did Mr. Rinfret attempt to reduce the volume of service or his personnel?

N.A.T.O. Small Arms Policy

MINISTERIAL representatives of Great Britain, the United States, France and Canada will begin conferences in Washington today in an attempt to find some way out of the disagreements that have arisen over small arms standardization, particularly in relation to infantry rifles and ammunition. Uniformity or a close approach thereto in this aspect of Atlantic Treaty rearmament was one of the objects of the N.A.T.O., but up to now the three leading nations, Britain, the U.S. and France, have been pursuing courses leading further away from rather than towards that goal.

A situation has been created in fact, wherein the outbreak of another war could find the western allies with an even wider diversity of weapons and ammunition than hitherto. The United States adheres to its .30 calibre Garands and carbines, with some justification on the score of supplies on hand if not on the effectiveness and suitability of the weapons themselves. Great Britain, seeking the best possible rifle for its troops, has made a revolutionary change in design, and has begun production of a new rifle for which great efficiency is claimed, but whose .28 calibre would wash out any possibility of standardizing ammunition. France, too, has introduced a new type of rifle, though one which could use U.S. ammunition if necessary.

Canada, caught in the middle, has 30's from the last war which it had agreed to turn over to other European nations, has acquired enough Garands to equip a division, and now does not know what to do with either. No nation has been placed in a more invidious position by all this than Canada which has been forced by circumstances to make and record decisions regarding the arming of its own troops and which as one of the arsenals under the Atlantic Treaty must soon what it is to do about tooling factories for production of weapons and ammunition.

It may turn out to be fortunate for N.A.T.O., however, that the Dominion has been put in this position, because it is what led Defence Minister Claxton to press for the meetings now about to be held, at a time when the other nations seemed to have written off any hope of standardization. As Mr. Claxton has pointed out, the Dominion's whole rifle policy hinges on the outcome of these meetings. Of transcending importance is the influence they may have on the efficiency of N.A.T.O. as a whole, in the field, in arms production and in maintenance of supply. It will be a major accomplishment if the meetings can save the nations involved from committing themselves irrevocably to differing policies.

It Seems Hopeless

THE SLIGHT opening in the iron curtain caused by the printing by Pravda of Foreign Minister Morrison's statement on relations between the West and Soviet Russia, revealed nothing new. Pravda's savage rebuttal in the same issue, savage in its language for its sentiments were to be expected, unfortunately makes it evident once more there is little real hope of any kind of amity with the Soviet state.

The Moscow newspaper denounces Mr. Morrison's plan of good will towards the Russian people as lies or distortions, which is a nice courteous way of referring to a British cabinet minister, especially by a newspaper which is the official organ of the Communist Party and therefore speaks with the voice of the Kremlin. One scarcely assumed the newspaper would allow Mr. Morrison's statement to be read by its readers without editorial reply, but the tone and temper of the rebuttal is so disappointing that one almost feels like saying "what's the use."

It is doubtful if anything of the slightest value has been gained by the British foreign secretary in having Pravda print his remarks verbatim. He meant well, and hoped to reach at least some minds in Russia that might have cause to doubt the truth of their own party propaganda. As the event has shown, any real penetration of the Soviet curtain seems impossible and the attempt has merely provided the Communist oligarchy with another opportunity to spread deceit and misrepresentation among the Russian people.

THE CONSERVATORY

Sir.—The opportunity of acquiring the Royal Roads Conservatory is too good to pass up. Since the provincial government already provides for the upkeep of a library, a museum, archives, totent park and other educational and recreational projects it seems to me that it could reasonably be asked to take over the administration and upkeep of this conservatory. It could be placed either in the vicinity of the new boiler plant or in the Government House grounds. In my opinion, the latter would be the ideal situation for the grounds are now open to the public and it is probable that at some future time Government House will no longer be used for residential use. If and when that time comes these grounds could be made into a botanical garden, and if the Richardson Street slope was landscaped these gardens would rival any in the world, for the view of the Olympics would enhance the amenities of the gardens. . . .

TRAVELED BELLS

Sir.—The following may be of interest to some of our American visitors to Victoria who are interested in church bells.

The bells of St. Michael's, Charleston, South Carolina, were originally cast in London, England, at the Whitechapel foundry of Mears & Stainbank, in 1764. After their arrival, they were rung regularly for the services of the church, for public festivities and as the city fire alarm. During the revolution they were seized as spoils of war and shipped back to England. After having been repaired at Mears & Stainbank, they were returned in 1783 and rehanging in their old belfry at Charleston.

In 1838, the two treble bells were again sent to England and recast after having been cracked in ringing an alarm for fire. In the Confederate war the peel of eight bells were taken down and stored in Columbia.

They were damaged in the fire of 1865 and shipped back to Charleston in a ruinous condition.

The broken and melted bell metal was then returned to England to the original founders and recast of the identical metal and to the same pattern as had been used for their founding a century before.

In 1881, while sounding a fire alarm, the treble bell was cracked, probably due to being hit with a hammer on the outside edge. It was then shipped to England and recast at the Whitechapel foundry.

On its return, the city of Charleston, desiring to preserve the historic ring, built a fire tower and relieved St. Michael's bells of the duty of sounding fire alarms.

Thus, in 200 years, the bells of St. Michael's, Charleston, have made five Atlantic crossings, and three of them two additional trips.

SLOW DRIVERS

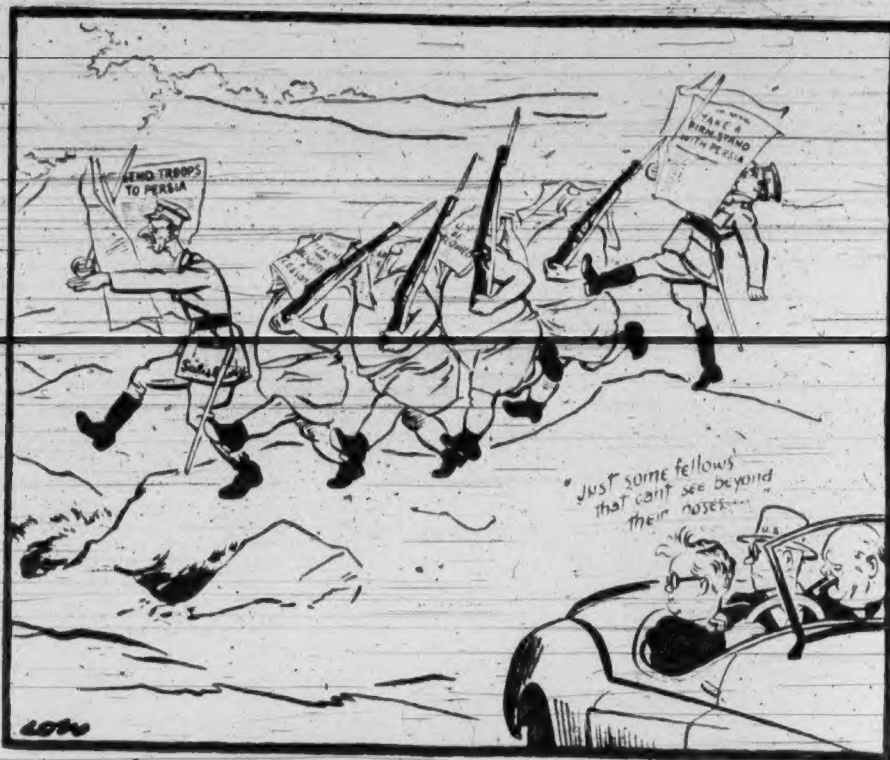

Sir.—The warning conveyed in the editorial concerning slow driving is timely and necessary. The slow driver may be a nuisance but so long as he keeps well to the right, he is not the menace to life and property that the fast driver is. Public highways can never be speedways until special lanes are constructed for the sole use of the fast-moving vehicles.

Traffic experts all over the continent state that the man driving a car at high speeds has not the control over his vehicle as has the one travelling at a moderate rate, and driving examiners repeatedly assert that the slow, careful driver is a better safety bet than the over-confident one.

With almost daily reports of cars going out of control, smashing into trees and poles, over cliffs or into other cars, one would think all responsible persons would advocate more care instead of more speed, while present road conditions prevail.

EXERCISE ON SALISBURY PLAIN

Thinking Aloud

... of shoes—and ships—and sealing wax—of cabbages and kings."

By TOM TAYLOR

THE announcer said that the next number, a Strauss waltz, would be a flashback to a more gracious era. In short, it would evoke the element of association.

As of course it did. Without effort many gentlemen would summon a mental picture of elegant ladies, courtly gentlemen and an urbanity pushed into the background by the evolution of shirt-sleeved democracy.

Simply because they have seen movies of Austria, before the deluge or read about the Viennese waltz and a gay capital filled with long petticoats and a leisurely air.

And the mind leaps instantly to connect the present with the past.

There are those who would divorce themselves from what has gone before, an impossible feat, fondly imagining themselves to be the creators of new thought. Even the genius who breaks fresh ground does so only because of someone ahead of him.

That is why a tune, Strauss waltz, Brahms concerto or Tin Pan Alley hit, strikes a responsive chord. The true music lover himself, in fact, bent only on savoring the composer's musical intent, is even liable to have his interest diverted by association of ideas.

It couldn't be a tune, of course, that plumbs the depths of past experience. It can be a smell—or anything else.

Two nights ago, for instance, a perfume drifted over my garden fence and I sniffed, immediately thrusting several decades aside as though they had never been. The cause was my neighbor spraying some confection on his fine array of chrysanthemums, which incidentally promise a happy fulfillment come October.

The scent, sweet and seductive, was exactly like the taste of the cheap gum I nibbled at as a boy, if you will pardon such a gross reference. And over the years the recollection had lain dormant, waiting to be drawn to the surface by a metal sprayer.

All through life the past will haunt a person even if he doesn't know it. The element of association is the most powerful of all mental stimulants.

The storyteller, for example, who is not familiar with the "that reminds me" that others in the invariably boring tale mistook, for real storytellers are few and far between. Or with the man who must cap your experience by one similar to him and of course much more important.

Women weep at weddings, not because they are sorry for the bride—it's too soon to decide that point yet—but because they think immediately of their own wedding day and the tears are inevitably nostalgic. A song, for instance, especially potent as a reminder of some incident of yesteryear, may summon back any one of a thousand memories.

This is what gives richness to life, which would be a barren thing indeed if today weren't linked to yesterday.

No Victorian enters the Memorial Arena to watch, perhaps, the Shamrocks play or Mr. Rocky Brooks' human belmchisms (like one another in playful agony, without associating this building with the civic agony of its birth. No Boer War veteran ever reads about Vimy Ridge or Monte Cassino without recalling Ludovisi or the relief of Mafeking. No old-time visitor to Victoria keeps coming here without, apparently, deploring the passage of dowagers fondly remembered, along with their crumpets and the gracious era they like a Strauss waltz, represented in their heyday.

It's always thus and thus it always will be. Whether one likes it or not. On larger issues, I suppose, no one would have it otherwise.

Gerald Waring

Reporting From Ottawa

WHEN Finance Minister Abbott shifts over to the Justice Department, as he appears likely to do before the year is out, he'll escape the many headlines of Finance but he'll acquire one new and unpleasant duty.

That is deciding which condemned murderers shall die, and which shall have their death sentences commuted to life imprisonment by exercise of the royal prerogative of mercy.

For a sensitive man, and despite his tax measures, Abbott is probably as sensitive as the next man, this usurpation of a function of God can result in great mental and spiritual strain.

The knowledge that whether a man lives or dies depends on the turn of one's hand is a burden not usually borne lightly. Even the judge who condemns the culprit to death has a mental escape in that he knows his sentence is not necessarily final; that the minister of justice is required to review it, and if he thinks fit, reduce it.

Actually, this is really the duty of the solicitor general, rather than the minister of justice. But as often as not there is no solicitor general, and then the duty devolves on the minister. That is how this comes to be part of Justice Minister Garson's job at the present time, and will be Abbott's too unless a new solicitor general is appointed.

Prime Minister St. Laurent, when he was justice minister, performed this duty for three and one-half years, until Joseph Jean was named solicitor general in 1945. Mr. Jean, I. L. Bisset, who took over the justice portfolio a year later after the arduous task of being wartime finance minister had sapped his strength nearly to the breaking point, is reported to have made the completion of the office of solicitor general a condition of his acceptance of the justice post. He wanted nothing to do with deciding who should live or die.

After Jean went to the Quebec bench, battle-hardened Lt. Col. Hughes LaPointe became solicitor general. But he moved to the veterans' affairs ministry a year ago, and since then Garson has had to perform the disagreeable function.

The criminal code makes the death sentence mandatory in all cases of murder, no matter what the circumstances may be. The judge is not permitted to take into consideration the mental and emotional state of a poor devil convicted of a crime of passion. That is the job of the solicitor general in deciding whether the death sentence should be commuted.

Thus, unlike in the United States, there is no such crime as second degree murder. Murder is murder, and the only punishment under the law is death by hanging.

Whether it wouldn't be better to give the courts some discretion as to degree of culpability is a moot question. For, despite all precautions, innocent men have been convicted of crimes they didn't commit. In Saskatchewan two decades ago an innocent man was hanged for murder. Had he been convicted of second degree murder, he would merely have gone to jail, and proof of his innocence wouldn't have come too late to save his life.

But this question receives little attention in parliament. There the issue, on the rare occasion it is raised, is the old one of "Should we abolish the death penalty?" The C.P.F. advocates this step, but never has been able to get a majority of M.P.'s to agree with it.

Mr. King's Doctrine's

From Saturday Night

THERE WILL, shortly be available to the public in the Proceedings of the Canadian Political Science Association a most remarkable paper by Mr. Eugene Forsey on the constitutional theories and practices of the late Mr. Mackenzie King, and we imagine that Mr. Forsey will eventually extend his discussion of this fertile topic into a full-size book. We have long felt that Mr. King was capable of wrestling constitutional theories from their main purpose to serve his political ends, and that in the King, Byng case he did so in a rather alarming manner. Mr. Forsey, by dint of tremendous industry, has dug up so many similar but less spectacular cases that he feels entitled to suggest, as a sort of motto for the King regime, "I have made the Senate my washbasin, and over the Commons have I cast out my shoe." The suggestion is not wholly unreasonable.

Mr. Forsey asks himself whether Mr. King's constitutional creed was really parliamentary democracy, was it not rather "parliamentary democracy with a thin parliamentary veneer?" As far back as 1923 he enunciated a doctrine which was already a denial of the right of parliament to change governments. "The whole effort manifested in the evolution of government," he said, "has been to bring the ministry to the point where, if for any reason whatever it ceases to hold the confidence of parliament, it will be obliged to go to the people." No recognition there of the possibility that parliament might be willing to grant its confidence to some other ministry. In 1925 with a new parliament not yet sitting, but containing 116 Conservatives, 301 Liberals, 24 Progressives, and four others, Mr. King said officially that among the courses open to him was that of advising "an immediate dissolution" of a parliament which had never even assembled! It was in Mr. King's view, within the rights of a Liberal government supported by only 101 out of 425 members of the Commons, to decide that parliament never should assemble.

In truth, apart from high prices which keep going higher, there is scarcely a sign anywhere that Korea and our rearmament program have made any vital difference to our economy at all. It might not be an exaggeration to say that more harm has been done to it by rearmament itself. Certainly a case could be made out for the claim that a lot of silly talk about rearmament and its consequences, plus the fact that the government took powers for wide controls and then didn't use them, have had much to do with higher prices.

It may be of course, that this condition will change that in time we'll have more action about rearmament and less talk about it. That is the change what a help and boon it might be if we could have a non-partisan ministerial speeches and press releases, bringing among other things happy release from the pundits and others (including some naive journalists) who with a show of great wisdom repeat such propaganda ad nauseum.

Fun, Fact and Fiction

During a keepers' strike in Balmuccia the animals barked, howled and roared in protest and there you have most of the world's troubles in a nutshell.

The individual's fight against regimentation is a long one, beginning as a rule at the age of three. In an attitude towards summer afternoon naps.

French explorers forcing a way through dense jungles came upon a party of cannibals about to have a feast on a late enemy. The cannibal chief came forward to greet the Frenchmen in perfect French. When they showed surprise at his command of their language, he explained that he had studied in France, even took two years of French literature at the Sorbonne.

"What?" exclaimed the explorer. "You've been educated in France and yet return to feed on human flesh? It's unbelievable."

"Well," replied the chief modestly, "I use a fork."

It is not unusual for a man to meet himself on the road coming back.

Thanks to the inoperability of the Oriental face, Reds in Korea can give an impression of being anxious for peace but not especially.

The Packsack

OF GREGORY CLARK

THERE are residential areas in London, Eng., known as towns or villages, that were built by the Victorians. One of these is called St. Christopher's. When which are in as good shape today as they were when built 100 years ago. And are occupied by the same class of people as originally.

A street of houses in this country today is good for about 20 years. By then, the actual fabric of the houses is beginning to decline. The brickwork cracks, the woodwork decays. In all our cities we have examples of streets of little and costly houses that lasted even as much as 50 years before they began to fall apart. And as the houses decay, the original class of good housekeepers moves out, and a class of second-rate housekeepers moves in. In due time, perhaps 35 years, the street has become definitely second-rate, the upkeep of the premises falls steadily behind its population density, it seems to have ash and garbage cans on view every day of the week instead of on only two, and the final stage comes when some of its new residents start using their back yards side drives and front lawns as a place to park their mucky motorbikes of various sorts.

Some architects and builders declare that this process of deterioration is chiefly due to our climate and its swiftly alternate frost and heat. Others admit it is a social problem, having to do with the fact that there is more poverty than wealth in human society, more bad homes than good. They are expensive of a sort of glibly-forgotten social-welfare and share the love of decency and order that manifests itself in the endless construction of new and beautiful residential streets. These untidy ones, like starlings or mice, want nothing more than a hole in which to build their nests of whatever comes to hand. Even London with its remarkable little islands of Victorian terraces and rows has, and always has had, its multitude of starlings and mice. Man may be said to be predominantly a nesting species.

Loose Talk

EVER SINCE the fighting started in Korea politicians, pundits and prophets, plus the inevitable "economists," have been assuring us that our rearmament program would be so great and so vigorous there must be inevitably be a shortage of labor and materials and all other things required by civilians. Indeed, we got to count that day last whose descending sun hadn't seen the minister for external affairs or the defense minister making a speech or putting out a "release" warning that rearmament was going to take at least 10 per cent of the national production, that goods for civilians must consequently become scarcer, that we must give the ministry wide control powers to get rearmament things they needed, and that all of us, facing a new world condition and the drive of our energetic ministers to meet it, must be willing to make sacrifices.

Having braced ourselves, having prepared for the worst as pictured by the ministers, plus the pundits and prophets who in press and radio parrot their words, has happened.

Well, to begin with the rearmament program, after a year of it, isn't taking anything like 10 per cent of the national production (actually about 5 per cent). Instead of rearmament spending at the rate of $1,000,000,000 we have rearmament spending at the rate of about half of that. Instead of a shortage of labor there actually is some unemployment. Instead of a scarcity of civilian goods, there is no real scarcity at all.

In truth, apart from high prices which keep going higher, there is scarcely a sign anywhere that Korea and our rearmament program have made any vital difference to our economy at all. It might not be an exaggeration to say that more harm has been done to it by rearmament itself. Certainly a case could be made out for the claim that a lot of silly talk about rearmament and its consequences, plus the fact that the government took powers for wide controls and then didn't use them, have had much to do with higher prices.

It may be of course, that this condition will change that in time we'll have more action about rearmament and less talk about it. That is the change what a help and boon it might be if we could have a non-partisan ministerial speeches and press releases, bringing among other things happy release from the pundits and others (including some naive journalists) who with a show of great wisdom repeat such propaganda ad nauseum.

World News In Review

By ERIC M. SMITH

(From A.P., U.P., I.N.S. Reuters)

The Royal Canadian Navy says an Ottawa hospital soon will take delivery of three helicopters, marking the start of a new branch of the air arm of Canada's sea service.

Notwithstanding tests by R.C.N. officers at the factory in Niagara Falls, N.Y., the three "copters" are designed for use aboard an "Arctic patrol" vessel being built at St. John's.

Pending completion of the ship, the helicopters will be used for training purposes at the naval air station at CFB Shearwater, Dartmouth, N.S.

In Washington, on the other hand, the U.S. Navy reports it has stopped buying more aircraft until it has adequately evaluated what it has learned from recent combat and production experience.

The U.S. Air Force, however, differs. Air Force chief of staff Hoyt H. Vandenberg has asked Congress for Washington funds to build more than 5,000 new planes and has warned that Iran and Yugoslavia are among places where Red aggression "may burst into flame" at any moment.

Britain, says a London report, now has a jet fighter in production that is faster than the U.S. F-86 Sabre or the Russian MiG-15. The new plane, an interim model, is the Hawker P.106.

From Washington again comes information that military personnel in combat zones may soon be wearing body armor that will deflect a machine bullet fired at point-blank range.

A high U.S. source in Frankfurt, Germany, has predicted that 175,000 German troops will be integrated into a European army by the end of 1953 "if all goes well."

Looking Ahead

Interviewed at Port Hope, Ont., R. H. Anthony, Jelen says he has not lost hope that an agreed settlement of differences may be reached between the Communists and western democracies, but the west must be strong before it can hope to negotiate the settlement.

In London, Air Under-Secretary Alick Croxall has told Communists that present plans in case we break out call for the U.S. to undertake almost the whole of strategic bombing.

From Washington comes word that 19 U.S. oil companies operating abroad are on the verge of putting into effect their recently approved plan to combine forces to offset the loss of oil production in Iran.

Slump in Construction Continues in Area

The slump in construction in Greater Victoria is continuing, according to building permit figures compiled yesterday by municipal building departments.

In every district building activity is less than in the same period of 1950.

In Victoria during July, new construction was valued at $275,564, compared with $385,686 in the same month of 1950.

In Oak Bay last month permits were issued for buildings valued at $69,100, compared with $104,300 last July. So far this year, construction has been valued at $369,746, compared with $475,750 in 1950.

In Central Saanich last month permits were issued for construction worth $82,250. This figure includes a permit for a $75,000 new school for West Saanich.

Power to Create Credit Held Parliament's Right

Right to create credit in Canada must be taken from the banks and restored to parliament, Orville Kennedy, national organizer of the Social Credit Association of Canada, said here yesterday.

Mr. Kennedy, in his first public speaking engagement, addressed a luncheon meeting and an audience at the Naval Veterans Hall on Broad Street on the evening of July 31, when 600 people gathered to hear him.

During the evening Mr. Kennedy reviewed the strength of the Social Credit party in Alberta and its growing organization in this province.

He said many groups were formed in the Greater Victoria area as well as in Courtenay, Duncan and other island districts.

July Weather Normal for Victoria

Weatherwise July was actually normal month for Victoria. Despite the drought, which is now in its 30th day, rainfall was less than half an inch below normal.

Measurable rain fell only once, July 11, when 0.1 inches was recorded at the Gonzales hill observatory. Average for the month, however, is only 0.16 inches.

Sunshine for July was slightly over the normal dose of 444 hours. The 388 recorded hours was short of the 407-hour record of 1947.

The combination of a little extra sun, a little less rain and low rainfall in June, however, gave Southern Vancouver Island its parched appearance.

No rainfall is yet in sight to break the drought.

Weather statistics for July: Mean temperature 60° (normal); Maximum temperature 71° (normal); Minimum temperature 47° (normal).

Aluminum temperature on the gauge 47, July 31.

Rainfall this year: 16.72 inches, 2.16 inches above normal.

Uncle Wiggly Story - - - By Howard Garis

Uncle Wiggly was in the woods at the edge of Frog Pond. His Amusement Red was tied up along shore and most of the boys and girls were having a fun picnic. Nurse James had made lots of cake, ice cream, candy and popcorn.

Buster and his chums were playing ball. Buntie and her chums were playing with their dolls. Uncle Wiggly thought this was a good time to go ashore and look for an adventure. And he found one.

As I told you in yesterday's story, the rabbit gentleman was walking along a path in the woods when he heard the bushes rustle. Then, out of the bushes, came walking a very funny animal. It seemed to be made of cones from a pine tree.

"Hello, Uncle Wiggly," said the strange animal in a sort of wooden voice. "Hello!"

"Oh, you know me, do you?" asked the rabbit gentleman. "Sure I know you," answered the animal who looked like a lot of pine cones stuck together. "Everybody knows you."

"Well, that's nice," said the rabbit gentleman as he twinkled his pink nose. "But I don't know you, my funny little chap. I have never seen you before."

"I will do that," said the rabbit gentleman. "Then I will have a story to tell the boys and girls when I get back to my raft after the fun picnic. Lead on, Piney Cone."

"Follow me," said the funny animal as he walked ahead of the rabbit gentleman down the winding path. As Piney Cone walked he rattled and clattered as you might expect. For an animal made of dried pine cones naturally will rattle and clatter as he walks.

"Is your home much farther along this path, Piney Cone?" asked Uncle Wiggly after a while.

"On no, not much farther. My mother and father will be delighted to see you, Uncle Wiggly."

"Do they know me?" asked the rabbit gentleman.

"I think they have met you once or twice," said Piney Cone. "That is strange," answered Mr. Wiggly. "I do not ever remember having seen any animals who look like a lot of pine cones stuck together. But nature is wonderful. Lead on, Piney Cone."

"Follow me," called the funny little animal looking back.

"Uncle Wiggly followed. And, a moment or two later, something very strange happened.

I will tell you about it tomorrow, if the rooster doesn't crow in the night and wake up the eggs in the incubator so they jump up and down and break their shells."

"CASA GLOMA"

The gay, candy-colored, giant umbrella were stuck in the lawn a just that right & candy-

California seaside resort. A sun-kist load of curves was reflected in the water, her blonde hair ling down over half her face, so that we knew it must be Vermont Lake. This stopped us cold (the pool I mean), so I shut off the purring Plymouth, and we just sat there & stared. "Oh," sighed Trudie, "did you EVER, in all your life, see a lovelier pool than that?" Nobody said a word.

"What's that," I said, coming in, "pool?" oh yeah... pool?... hummmmm... yeah... sure is beautiful. "Just imagine," she continued, "guess you got to have a Cadillac to blow into a place like this... wouldn't I like to get outa these jeans & into THAT water. "Whatcha going to do?" sed the G.F. as I opened the door, I started walking toward the office.

"I am going," I replied, "ask about their rates." "For Heaven's sakes . . . U come back here, we can't afford to stay here why Heavens it would be . . . but I just put one finger to my lips & told her to shunsh. "Good afternoon," said the "Hart-Shaffer & Marx" behind the polished desk, "and have you a reservation?" "Well . . . No . . . haven't . . . we were just passing thru on our way to L.A., and we . . ." "I see . . . I see," & he flipped thru his cards in the polished rack, "well . . . now isn't

... Gregory Peck had to do some re-takes," & he dipped his pen in the ink, and swivelled about the register, "so I can let you have 'Casa Gloma.'" I had his pen in my hand, & was just going to sign, when I remembered what I had come for. "Oh," I mumbled.

bled, with a sickly sort of smile
'and how much would that be?' Right away I was sorry I had asked, & I felt no one had ever asked such a question before, 'cause he had to refer again to his lovely cards, & then he smiled in an ever so patronizing way, 'Casa Gloma' . . . the rat

'cause I royly put his pen back in the holder, as I smiled "I guess that's a little over our heads (hi-ha-ha) we're on a sorta budget going a long way you know (hi-ha-ha-ha-ha)." Our daughters were captivated "with your pool, so that . . . I (hi-ha-ha-ha-ha)." "O-

... you would just be staying overnite then?" "Yes ... ju overnite." He looked at my shirt, my hand on the pen, & then he swivelled the register again & said $10.00. There was nothing else to do but sign. "The he will get your bags & direct you to 'Casa Gloria.'" I can't de scribe the looks on the faces of the gals when I came back with this kindly colored "boy" at my heels. He gathered up our bags and shuffling on ahead, he told us, that "I'm sure you'll enjoy your stay here. There is tennis, croquet, riding, the plunge, & our own private boardwalk & beach."

Dinner¹⁴ served until 8, or you may have it sent to "Casa Gloma." He unlocked the door, ushered us in. Trude was just going to shout with joy when nearly paralyzed, her hand threw her the fatherly frown Grandpa gave "Casa Gloma" the full treatment opening up the Venetians, then going to the bathroom & spreading the bright white towel I'd ever seen, right on the floor. We did our best stand about in that "to-the-maximum-horn" attitude, but Trade Jockey couldn't make it, but blurted out "Holy Gosh . . . a drawing-room too . . . a white telephone on the

... I tried to flip him casually but in the end I had to hold on to the quarter at arm's length, as we all had to hold our breath. We left when we collapsed on the down cushions & howled with laughter, and I heard him outside on the wide veranda laughing.

Destroyers Athabaskan, Crusader Leaving Today for Pearl Harbor

MARINE AND TRAVEL NEWS

The destroyers Athabaskan and Crusader will sail from Esquimalt at 2 p.m. today for Hawaii.

The Athabaskan is returning from Korea to assume duties with the United States naval base at Pearl Harbor.

Crusader, carrying 70 naval aviators for training purposes, will return to Esquimalt after a four-day visit at the base.

When the Athabaskan reaches the war zone she will relieve her sister ship, Huron, which will destroy manoeuvres and then return to Halifax.

Navy Regatta Events Set

The Royal Canadian Navy Yacht Club has completed the program for its second annual regatta this week-end and a large entry from the Royal Victoria Yacht Club's racing fleet is indicated.

Races on three successive days have been arranged for auxiliary cruisers, stars, nightbirds and snipe.

The regatta will begin Friday evening with races for all four classes from the "Cutter" Bay start line to a finish line south of the Esquimalt drydock in Esquimalt harbor.

Series races will be held Saturday afternoon and Sunday morning for auxiliary cruisers on an outside course extending to Albert Head and Butcher's Bay.

A dance will be held in the wardroom of HMCS Sackville Saturday night and on Sunday a buffet luncheon will be served there before the prize-giving.
